

Zootopia is Here

Have you been to the office lately? Well, you'd be surprised to look at the animals there. That's right! 6O, Miss Oliver's class has made creatures big and small come to life! Not exactly the real animal kind but creations from black cardboard and white chalk.

We started off studying animal pictures in order to plan our artwork and there was a chance to swap pictures if you didn't like the animal. We then moved on to drawing outlines on black cardboard with a pencil.

What a sight it was to see! The swish of the chalk gracefully started to make an animal with extra details seemingly 'tattooed' onto faces and animal parts.

Soon, the class had achieved every figure on the face of the earth and it was then time to add the textured skin, fur and feathers. To help out with this, we also used white pencils to go into depth. From a distance, it looked realistic and from a close view it looked extremely detailed.

It took time, because as they say, slow and steady wins the race but now all we needed to do was laminate and hang them up.

Some of our 3D sketches were sent to the office for more people to enjoy art in it's purest form, including mine, so why don't you go take a look?
