Art is more than just a practice – it is a way of life.
Art is more than just a skill – it is a passion.
Art is more than just an image – each one tells a story.

We have just finished a term of art which focused on some aspects of Japanese culture. I try to make each art lesson more than just a study on technique or colour. I recently read about the power of art to take cultural practices from where they are from & integrate them into different parts of the world without losing their identity.

There, these art forms can be used to entertain, create awareness, and even inspire foreigners to accept these cultures, no matter how strange or alien they may seem. This is especially important in our highly globalised world. Art has played an important role in helping fight against intolerance of different cultures, racism, and other forms of unjust societal segregation. With immigration becoming a growing trend, the world's countries are expected to be more tolerant and accepting of those who enter their borders. Art can help make that happen by making sure that identities and their cultures are given due recognition around the world. Artists can strengthen the will and push people to act. Artists do not think like policymakers or academics people. Artists think from their heart – big, revolutionary and visionary ideas. This is why artists are able to move people to action, thus creates a significant cultural and political contribution. This is what makes art powerful!
